Farm Bureau News

Get Ready Now

Eight now is a good time to think about the short pastures that late summer and early fall so often bring. On many farms the stock actually lose in flesh and go down in milk production as the pastures fail in the dry months. This is a loss always, and it may be a serious loss to the keeper of milk cows.

The farmer who has a silo with some surplus silage in it is fortified against the time of dry pastures. Many however have no silage left for summer consumption and those as well as the farmers who have no silo at all should fortify themselves by planting some crop that will give a supply of green feed at that season. Cow peas, soy beans, sudan grass can be sown to furnish grazing then: any of these crops or corn or sorghum can be planted to as come in right for soiling crops. Corn for soiling should be just coming into its roasting ear stage; sorghum should be well headed out, soy beans and cow peas should be setting their pods. Of course one can not tell exactly when the season of need will come, so it is well to plan with the idea of extending the season of available soiling and emergency pasture crops as much as practical.

Clover Mildew

A white coating or covering is evident on many fields of red clover in the county and is causing farmers more or less concern. This mildew is not dangerous at all, no trouble has been reported from stock grazing on clover so affected. This will probably make the hay somewhat dusty, if not properly cured but there will be no danger from use of clover so affected.

The University Extension Specialist, Dr. T. P. Polk spent two days in the county inspecting farms that have parasitic and infectious diseases of live stock. In one flock of sheep visited a post-mortem was held and it was found that this animal was infected with intestinal parasites as well as grub in the head. There are a number of places to be visited in the next few days in regard to various live stock troubles.

Considerable interest is being manifested throughout the county in the tuberculin testing work. There are at present twenty-five people who have requested the work and more requests are being received right along. The County Agent recently received word from the State Veterinarian regarding the sending of a man to Crittenden county to continue the work. He states that almost every county in the state is asking for the work and as his force is limited he can promise no definite date as yet. As soon as a man can be sent to this county the County Agent will be notified.

WHY HE DOES NOT LIKE MARION

Mr. Ben Wofford, the dry goods traveling salesman, said to a reporter "I visit this town twice a year and that is just twice too often." "Why?" asked the reporter, "Is business not good?"

"Business is all right" replied Mr. Wofford "But I travel over four states and have visited every town in my territory and this is the only town where I have to pay more than five cents for Coca-Cola. It is too bad. This is a fine little city with its large number of beautiful shade trees. And this is Marion, the birth place of Ollie James. Too bad about the Coca-Cola."

Just received a beautiful line of Midsummer Hats. MRS. H. C. LAMB

Mrs. H. H. Kirk, of Crayne was in Marion Wednesday shopping.

MARION PURE FOOD BAKERY

Mr. E. R. Hutson, of Carmi, Ill., has come to Marion and will establish a first class bakery to be located in the H. V. Stone building on North Main Street. Mr. Hutson has for several years operated a bakery at Norris City, Ill., and sold out only a short time before coming here. The bakery will be known as the Marion Pure Food Bakery.

Mr. O. R. Brown, an expert machinist of Battle Creek, Mich., has been employed to engineer the building of the oven and other machinery connected with the bakery.

The big oven when ready for use, will weigh more than 10,000 pounds and will have a capacity of 4000 loaves daily. It will be equal to that of the best of the big city bakeries and the people of Marion have cause to be proud that Mr. Hutson has located here. It is his intention to work up a wholesale as well as a retail trade for his bread.

When the bakery is established our home people would do well to make it a rule to buy only made-in-Marion bread.

DAD

He may wear a last year's straw hat, his finger nails may need manicuring; his vest may hang a little loose, and his pants may bag at the knees; his face may show signs of a second day's growth, and the tin dinner bucket he carries may be full of dents and doughnuts; but don't you call him "the old man." He's your father.

For years and years he has been rustling around to get things together. Never once has he failed to do the right thing by you. He thinks you are the greatest boy on earth, bar none, even though you plaster your hair back, wear smart clothes, smoke cigarettes and fail to bring home a cent. He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth—your mother.

He is "some man" and not "the old man." If you win as good a wife as he did you will have to go some, boy—The Silent Partner.

Selected by Mrs. Jas. A. Moore.

RE-ELECTED HERE

The Board of Education elected Prof. R. E. Jagers the second time before he consented to serve as Superintendent of our City Schools. He had decided to return to school but could not refuse the plea of the people of the city of Marion.

Mr. Jagers, while here, has certainly worked hard to build up our schools and succeeded in a marked degree. The Press congratulates Marion on having Mr. Jagers another year.

Come to the Tolu Community Fair next fall and see some "sure nuff" hogs.

Mr. O. R. Brown, who is engineering the construction of the new bakery left for Cincinnati Wednesday.

Mrs. H. H. Kirk, of Crayne was in Marion Wednesday shopping.

When your clothes get spotted have them Dry Cleaned. It certainly is a economy to have them dry cleaned and the price is right. Send all your work to

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

After a week's most delightful entertainment, the Commencement exercises of the Marion High School and the Marion Graded School closed Wednesday evening by an address at the school auditorium by Hon. George Colvin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Mr. Colvin is an instructive speaker, an orator and a good entertainer and is deeply interested in the schools of Kentucky. His address was listened to by one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the auditorium.

Everyone was delighted with the address and at its close Mr. Colvin received many hearty handshakes from the audience, both old and young. Though admired by all Mr. Colvin seems to have an attraction especially for children and young people.

The school faculty are to be congratulated upon procuring him to make the closing address.

FOUND A JOINT SNAKE

Mr. John T. Stewart who resides in the Deanwood section, while in town the other day related a story which, while he vouchsafes for its truthfulness, he admits it will be hard for his friends to believe. The story as related tells of the finding of what is called a joint snake. This reptile, if it be a snake, has puzzled the scientists for many years and many persons even doubt its existence. He describes it as being about a foot long, as large around as his thumb and in appearance resembles the spreadhead, which at first he took it to be.

Mr. Stewart says that when he touched the snake with a stick it disjointed, separating and scattering itself into thousands of small pieces, each piece seeming to be an independent, living creature. Stopping to watch the disjointed members, which were scattered over a surface of several feet, Mr. Stewart says the pieces began wiggling around toward each other and hooking onto one another until finally all the particles had united and became again one snake.

Realizing that this story would probably be doubted when told to his friends and knowing, from the study of Scripture that from the mouths of two or three witnesses the truth could be established, Mr. Stewart called to Messrs. Fell Walker and Ben Drennan who were passing, and they too will vouch for the truthfulness of the story.

Who will now dare to say "There ain't no such a snake?"

ARRESTED AT PROVIDENCE

Deputy Sheriff Martin, of Providence, arrested Sherda Lewis, who is under an indictment of a Crittenden County Grand Jury charged with deserting his child. The prisoner was turned over to county officials and placed in jail to await Circuit Court.

Since the expiration of his term of office as County Judge, though engaged in other pursuits, he has practiced the medical profession more or less. He will take a post graduate course this summer, after which he will return to his first love, doing an exclusive office practice.

"Martin," she said, impetuously interrupting him. "I've got to talk to you! I've meant to write it—so many times, I've had it in mind ever since I left Red Creek!"

"Shoot!" Martin said, with his favorite look of indulgent amusement.

"There are marriages that without any fault on either side are a mistake," Cherry began, "any contributory fault, I mean—"

"Talk United States?" Martin growled, smiling, but on guard.

"Well, I think our marriage was one of those!" Cherry said.

"What have you got to kick about?" Martin asked, after a pause.

"I'm not kicking!" Cherry answered, with quick resentment. "But I wish I had words to make you realize how I feel about it!"

Martin looked gloomily up at her, and shrugged.

"This is a sweet welcome from your wife!" he observed. But as she regarded him with troubled and earnest eyes, perhaps her half-forgotten beauty made an unexpected appeal to him, for he turned toward her and eyed her with a large tolerance. "What's the matter, Cherry?" he asked. "It doesn't seem to me that you've got much to kick about. Haven't I always taken pretty good care of you? Didn't I take the house and move the things in; didn't I leave you a whole month, while I ate at that rotten boarding-house, when your father died; haven't I let you have—how long is it?—seven weeks, by George, with your sister?"

Cherry recognized the tones of his old arraigning voice. He felt himself ill-treated.

"Now you come in for this money," he began. But she interrupted him hotly:

"Martin, you know that is not true!"

"Isn't it true that the instant you can take care of yourself you begin to talk about not being happy, and so on?" he asked, without any particular feeling. "You bet you do! Why, I never cared anything about that money, you never heard me speak of it. I always felt that by the time the lawyers and the heirs and the witnesses got through, there wouldn't be much left of it, anyway!"

Too rich in her new position of the woman beloved by Peter to quarrel with Martin in the old unhappy fashion, Cherry laid an appealing hand on his arm.

"I'm sorry to meet you with this sort of thing," she said, simply. "I blame myself now for not writing you just how I've come to feel about it! We must make some arrangement for the future—things can't be as they were!"

"You've had it all your way ever since we were married," he began. "Now you blame me—"

"I don't blame you, Martin!"

"Well, what do you want a divorce for, then?"

"I don't even say anything about a divorce," Cherry said, fighting for which her tortured spirit seemed to coin the hackneyed phrase.

"That stuff!" Martin sneered, under his breath. "Well, all right, I don't care, get your divorce!" he agreed, carelessly. "But I'll have something to say about that, too," he warned her.

"You can drag the whole thing up before the courts if you want to—only remember, if you don't like it much, you did it. It never occurred to me even to think of such a thing! I've done my share in this business; you never asked me for anything I could give you that you didn't get; you've never been tied down to housework like other women; you're not raising a family of kids—go ahead, tell every shop-girl in San Francisco all about it, in the papers, and see how much sympathy you get!"

"Oh, you beast!" Cherry said, between her teeth, furious tears in her eyes. The water swam in a blur of blue before her as they rose to go downstairs at Sausalito.

Martin glanced at her with impatience. Her tears never failed to anger him.

"Don't cry, for God's sake!" he said, nervously glancing about for possible onlookers. "What do you want me to do? For the Lord's sake don't make a scene until you and I have a chance to talk this over quietly—"

Cherry's thoughts were with Peter. In her soul she felt as if his arm was about her, as if she were pouring out to him the whole troubled story, sure that he would rescue and console her. She had wiped her eyes, and something recovered calm, but she trusted herself only to shrug her shoulder as she preceded Martin to the train.

There was no time for another word, for Alix suddenly took possession of them. She had had time to bring the car all the six miles to Sausalito, and meant to drive them direct to the valley from there.

She greeted Martin affectionately, although even while she did so her eyes went with a quick, worried look to Cherry. They had been quarreling, of course—it was too bad, Alix thought, but her own course was clear. Until she could take her cue from them, she must treat them both with cheerful unconsciousness of the storm.

They reached the valley and Martin was magnanimous about the delayed lunch. Anything would do for him, he said; he was taking a couple of days' holiday, and everything went.

Kow was chopping wood after lunch, and he sauntered out to the block with suggestions; Alix, laying a fire for the evening, simply because she liked to do that sort of work, was favored with digressions. Finally Martin pushed her aside.

"Here, let me do that," he said. "You'd have a fine fire here, at that rate!"

Later he went down to the old house with them, to spend there an hour that was trying to both women. It was almost in order now; Cherry had pleased her simple fancy in the matter of hangings and papering, and the effect was fresh and good.

"Girls going to rent this?" Martin asked.

"Unless you and Cherry come live here," Alix said boldly. He smiled tolerantly.

"Why should we?"

"Well, why shouldn't you?"

"Leaving, eh?"

"No, not leaving. But you could transfer your work to San Francisco, couldn't you?"

Martin smiled a deep, wise, long-enduring smile.

"Oh, you'd get me a job, I suppose?" he asked. "I love the way you women try to run things," he added, "but I guess I'll paddle my own canoe for a while longer!"

"There is no earthly reason why you shouldn't live here," Alix said pleasantly.

"There is no earthly reason why we should!" Martin returned. He was annoyed by a suspicion that Alix and Cherry had arranged between them to make this plan the alternative to a divorce. "To tell you the honest truth, I don't like Mill Valley!"

Alix tasted despair. Small hope of preserving this particular relationship. He was, as Cherry had said, "impossible."

"Well, we must try to make you like Mill Valley better!" she said with resolute good-nature. "Of course, it means a lot to Cherry and to me to be near each other!"

"That may be true, too," Martin agreed, taking the front seat again for the drive home.

"Well, but you can't expect the way we felt when we got married to last forever," he said, clumsily. "Do you suppose other men and women talk this way when the—the novelty has worn off?"

"I don't know how they talk. I only know how I feel!" Cherry said, chilled by the old generalization.

Martin, who had stretched his legs to their length, crossed them at the ankles, and shoved his hands deep into his pockets, staring at the racing blue water with somber eyes.

"What do you want?" he asked, heavily.

"I want to live my own life!" Cherry answered, after a silence during which her tortured spirit seemed to coin the hackneyed phrase.

"That stuff!" Martin sneered, under his breath. "Well, all right, I don't care, get your divorce!" he agreed, carelessly. "But I'll have something to say about that, too," he warned her.

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Howard Cummings had been separated from his wife, Martha, for over a year when he one evening saw her on the screen in a neighborhood movie theater. She looked more beautiful than ever on the screen—she girl had always been a particularly pretty girl—and seeing her again after so many months, affected Howard deeply.

As Howard gazed at Martha's winsomeness and saw her familiar smile and piquant characteristics, he felt a sudden rush of his old affection for her. The quarrel which had precipitated their separation seemed small and petty; the time since her departure rolled up dull and lonesome and he was possessed of an intense desire to find Martha and make up at once.

But when Martha had left him a year ago she had said she was leaving him for good. And Martha meant what she said. Was there any possible chance of ever getting her back again?

All the longing for Martha which Howard had suppressed during the year of their separation now swept over him in a tidal wave with his candid acknowledgment that he wanted her back again. Everything else in his life now seemed trivial and unimportant. But behind his longing loomed the great fear that he might not be successful in winning her back. And in addition there was another fear—the fear that he might not be able to find her.

Howard was a level-headed, practical, successful business man. Though young in years, he had already rolled up quite a fortune, so he had plenty of money with which to push his quest.

The first step in finding his wife was undoubtedly to ascertain the name of the film in which he had seen her and then try to locate her through the manufacturers.

Howard anticipated trouble in finding his wife. He knew that movie actresses are constantly changing companies, and that movie manufacturers themselves are also constantly coming and going. But, to his delight, his task proved to be surprisingly simple. The company making the film in which he had seen his wife was still operating, and his wife was still employed by the company, according to a telegram he received from the publicity manager of the company in response to his wire.

According to this telegram the company was operating at Fort Lee, N. J., a short distance from New York City. Upon receiving this information Howard started at once for New York in the earliest possible train for that city.

The third afternoon found Howard anxiously toiling up the hill at Fort Lee toward a big glass-covered building—the studio where his wife was employed. At the door of the studio a rather flashily dressed young man was waiting for him.

"You are Mr. Cummings, I presume?" queried this young man.

Howard nodded. "I am the publicity manager for the Marmon company," explained the young man. "Your wife is one of our most promising actresses. She will probably eventually be starred. Come this way, please."

With beating heart Howard followed his guide into the studio and out upon the huge floor, where furniture, lights and odds and ends were thrown about in apparent confusion. At first Howard was confused; at last, however, he saw that the odd glances cast at him by all the people who were standing around or rushing back and forth. He wanted only to see his wife.

Suddenly Howard's heart skipped a beat. His wife was coming toward him beautifully dressed in an evening gown. Howard looked at her hungrily. Never had she seemed prettier to him. In a moment their eyes met. He saw surprise, then an inscrutable look appear in his wife's eyes before she averted them for a minute or two. Then she came to him and held out her hand cordially.

"How are you, Howard?" she said. "I—I—" stammered Howard.

On the instant he stopped. A great burst of light blinded him for a moment. He heard some one—sounded like the publicity manager—saying: "That was a hasty dash," and then his eyes focused again on his wife to find her looking inscrutable and distant.

"I want to talk to you, Martha," said Howard. "Can't we go somewhere and talk?"

"Not now, Howard," said Martha rather coldly. "I'm due to rehearse some scenes now. But come back to-morrow. Perhaps we can talk to-morrow."

A feeling of resentment swept over Howard.

"I'm at the Consul hotel," he said briefly. "Suppose you phone me there tomorrow when you're not busy."

Without another word Howard turned and hurried from the studio.

Rage and resentment swept over him. What a reception! What treatment when he had come such a distance for the purpose of trying to make up with his wife! He had half a mind to call the whole thing off and go back to his home without making any further attempt at a reconciliation.

Then again the thought of the loneliness of the past year, of his really great love for the wife who had never seemed prettier than now swept over him. He threw back his shoulders.

"Of course she couldn't be anything but distant and cold with all those people around her," he told himself. "It will be different tomorrow—I'm sure it will."

It was different on the following day, but not in the manner Howard thought.

At breakfast the next morning as Howard was casually glancing through his paper, his eyes suddenly focused in horror at a picture on the theatrical page. The picture was a photo taken in a studio. It showed a man eagerly shaking hands with a brilliantly-dressed, beautiful actress. The woman's face was cold and distant. Over the picture was this caption: "Prominent Midwestern Business Man Seeks Reconciliation With Wife Who Is Becoming Famous in the Movies." The woman was his wife, the man was himself. Now he knew the meaning of that photographic flash while he was at the studio.

Howard went fighting mad at seeing this picture and reading the accompanying paragraphs giving intimate details of his life.

"Of course, Martha was in on it," he told himself. "She's crazy for publicity. No doubt she put up that publicity manager to put the thing across. It's a rotten thing to do and I'm done with her forever!"

Howard packed his grip at once, determined to return to his home forthwith. But to his disgust, there was no train until late in the afternoon and this made it necessary for him to put in the day in New York.

Howard tramped back and forth on Fifth avenue and Broadway, trying to find interest in the glowing show windows and the never-ending crowds. But he couldn't get his mind off the dismal end of his expedition.

At last Howard turned his steps toward the hotel, as it was nearing train time. Not once did he think of going back to the studio or even of calling up his wife.

His heart was exceedingly heavy as he opened the door to his room.

Then, as he stepped into the room, he gave a startled glance toward the window. There, seated in an armchair, was his wife!

"How did you get in here?" Why did they let you in?" demanded Howard.

"I—I showed them that picture in the paper," said Martha. "They couldn't refuse me then."

Russia's Reply at Genoa to the Allied Proposals Merely Dodges the Issues.

IS INACCEPTABLE TO FRANCE

Text of Russo-German Military Pact Published in Paris—No Peace Yet in Ireland—Chicago Wars on Labor Terrorists—Daugherty on Army Contract Frauds.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RUSSIA'S reply to the proposals of the allied nations represented at the Genoa conference, awaited with greatest anxiety for days, was handed in last Thursday, and proved to be not a real reply but a long controversial document.

"Wholly unsatisfactory," was the verdict of the French and Belgians, but M. Barthou and his colleagues awaited word from Paris before withdrawing from the conference.

On the other hand the British, though far from satisfied with the answer given by the Soviet delegates, professed to see in it a chance for further negotiations which might well lead to an amicable settlement. They called the Russian note distinctly conciliatory.

Concerning the crucial clauses of the allied note dealing with the restoration of foreign property confiscated by the Soviets, the Russians made the general proposition that all financial matters between Russia and the powers be placed in the hands of a mixed commission of experts, but they rejected the proposed mixed commission to determine the payment for nationalized property because it "would make the sovereignty of the Russian state a plaything of chance." Since the other powers refuse the immense loan the Russians demanded, the latter withdrew their renunciation of counter claims based on allied help given the various anti-bolshevik leaders.

Lloyd George was hopeful that, if the financial questions were turned over to a mixed commission, the conference might be carried along until his nonaggression pact is made a reality. The Italians are supporting him, while Japan shows signs of standing with France and Belgium in demanding immediate and definite reply by Russia.

THAT story of a military convention signed by representatives of the Russian Soviet army and the German general staff in Berlin April 3, first sprung by the London Times and vigorously denied, will not down. Now the Paris Journal L'Eclair prints what purports to be the text of the pact. In it the Germans agree to furnish the Red army with arms and material for 180 regiments of infantry and heavy field artillery for 20 infantry divisions; to train 20 Russian instructors in the latest developments of chemical warfare and to send technical experts to Russia to speed up the munition plants and open new ones. The German general staff pledges to reorganize the Russian Baltic and Black sea fleets and to supply at the earliest possible date 500 new airplanes together with a supply of spare parts, 150 field wireless outfits.

The Russian army staff guarantees the establishment in Russia of three German plants, one for the manufacture of airplanes, one for poison gas and one for arms, on condition that the Russian army can use the output when needed. German specialists would be admitted to "the new arms factory in Afghanistan." The two staffs, it is agreed, will prepare a joint plan of operations to give Russia access to the Baltic sea.

ANOTHER session of the council of the League of Nations opened Thursday in Geneva with Count Quiñones de Leon of Spain presiding. Unexpectedly, the earl of Balfour interjected the matter of Palestine, announcing that he would demand immediate approval of the British mandate, following formal agreement on the matter between Great Britain and the United States. It was feared this would create another opening for friction between France and Great Britain.

GENERAL WU PEI-FU'S victory over General Chang near Peking was complete. The Manchurian army was scattered and thousands were taken prisoners and disarmed, each man being given a sum of money which Wu obtained by levying on banks that had supported Chang. The defeated leader fled into the country with his body guard with Wu's soldiers in hot pursuit. Near Luangchow, on the railway to Mukden, Chang gathered some of his forces and entrenched, and at latest reports another fight was expected there. Wu, who appointed himself governor of Chihli province, approved the appointment of Wang Shih Cheng as premier to succeed Liang Shih-Yi, who fled to Japan. President Hsu then dismissed Chang as governor of Manchuria and deprived him of all his titles. More important was his action in decreeing that hereafter each province shall be responsible directly to the central government instead of through military dictators. He thus sought to abolish the system of tuchungs or military inspectors who have been ruling over two or more provinces and were virtually independent of Peking. General Wu says his sole aim is the reunification of China and the end of militarism, and he urges the immediate calling of a national assembly. He has no choice as to the form of government except that it be democratic and representative.

FOR a few days it looked as if Ireland might have something resembling peace—but only for a few days. On Wednesday the peace committee, on which both sides were represented, reported to Dail Eireann that it was unable to agree on a basis for adjusting the differences between the Free States and the republican extremists, neither party being able to compromise without complete surrender. At the same time the truce expired automatically. The radicals declare they will try to prevent the holding of the election scheduled for the second week in June and the Free State men declare it shall be held; which conflict of intentions furnishes the basis for a continuation of the bushwhacking warfare.

NAGGED by congress through a resolution for an investigation of Attorney General Daugherty's failure to proceed legally against those who have been robbing the government in war contracts, that official made a report to President Harding in which he blamed the delay on congress.

The attorney general laid the blame for failure to prosecute upon congress and promised an energetic campaign against war profiteers as soon as necessary legislation is enacted. He called for prompt action on the measure creating twenty-three additional federal judgeships, the bill establishing a special grand jury in the District of Columbia to grind out indictments against accused contractors, and an additional appropriation of $200,000 to enable the department of justice to continue its inquiries.

Mr. Daugherty called attention to the fact that nearly all the transactions in question took place during the preceding administration and that naturally little was done then to bring them to light. He promised that he would soon make public the names of influential persons who had knowledge of the transactions but were personally interested in concealing them.

DIRECTOR OF THE BUDGET DAWES made a report to the President on the operation of the budget system in which he showed it had resulted in economies totaling $225,000,000 for the current fiscal year, and that there would be a reduction of over $1,000,000,000 from the actual expenditures for 1921. In transmitting the report to the house appropriations committee Mr. Harding said it conveyed to the people the determination of those in authority to operate the government effectively at the least possible cost, to make the government's full contribution to a return to the normal ways of peace and ultimately lifting the excessive burden of taxation.

"Political bunk" was the retort of Democratic members of congress. They asserted the report was deceptive and that the actual expenditures for the routine business of the government have increased rather than decreased. They called attention to deficiency appropriations aggregating $202,000,000, but Representative Madden challenged them to deny that only $12,000,000 of this deficiency was attributable to the activities of the present administration.

M. SPENCER, the junior senator from Missouri, got into an unpleasant mess through his efforts to have the senate confirm the unfortunate appointment of Nat Goldstein to be internal revenue collector for the eastern Missouri district. Mr. Goldstein was a delegate to the Republican national convention but was unsatisfied after admitting he had accepted money from one of Frank O. Lowden's managers. The appointment was violently attacked in the senate, and Mr. Lowden, who was on an ocean steamer, sent a radiogram declaring that in his opinion Goldstein was unfit for the job. Finally, to relieve the President and Senator Spencer from embarrassment, Goldstein asked that the nomination be withdrawn. This was done, but the Democrats made it plain that they intended to keep the incident alive for use in the approaching campaign.

LEADERS of building trade unions in the Chicago district who have been fighting the Landis wage award appear to have overreached themselves at last. Not content with bomb throwing, incendiarism and blackmail, some of them or their hired gunmen last week killed two policemen who interrupted their operations, and wounded a third. The brutal murders aroused Chicago to the determination to wipe out the outlaw bands. Swift police raids caught a large number of labor leaders, including some who are ex-convicts and others who are now under conviction of crimes or awaiting trial. Among the prisoners, asserted the police, are the men really responsible for the reign of labor terrorism which has gripped Chicago for so long a time.

SAMUEL GOMPERS of course always has refused to countenance violence in labor disputes, but it is hard to see how he can entirely avoid some moral responsibility for these crimes in Chicago, in view of the open encouragement he recently gave the unions that are seeking to repudiate their agreements to accept the verdict which might be rendered by Judge Landis, the arbitrator chosen by themselves.

AMERICA lost one of her most eminent financiers in the death of Henry P. Davison, who passed away at the conclusion of an operation to remove tumor from the brain. By his own efforts he had attained high position among bankers and he had also accumulated a large fortune. During the World war he made a fine record as head of the American Red Cross.

AT THIS writing President Harding has not stated which of the plans for a soldier's bonus bill—the sales tax or the insurance—he prefers, or whether he will accept either one. The prediction in Washington is that he will veto the bill and that it will be passed over his veto. Leaders in congress have refused to let the matter go beyond July.

THE interallied war council, at Paris, has agreed that Germany shall manufacture a Zeppelin of 70,000 meters capacity to replace the one allotted to the United States by the Versailles treaty but destroyed in Germany. It will probably be delivered within nine months and a German crew is to bring it across the Atlantic.

THE federal railroad labor board issued an order last week that may serve to avert the threatened strike of 600,000 shompen and switchmen. This ruling places a ban on the contract system of farming out job work under which many roads are said to have been evading the orders of the board as to wages, working conditions and other matters.

THINGS BEGINNERS MUST LEARN FIRST

Explanation of Terms Used in Radio and of Its Basic Principles.

Due to the great interest taken in radio since broadcasting stations have been started, many radio terms are seen and heard that may be unfamiliar to the novice. Some of the most commonly used terms are explained and defined below.

Like light, heat and sound, radio energy is propagated in the form of a wave motion. Every one is familiar with the wave motion set up on the surface of a still body of water by the dropping of a stone into it.

Every time a point on the surface of the waves goes through a complete set of motions and starts to repeat those motions the wave is said to have gone through a cycle.

The number of complete cycles gone through per second is the frequency.

The human ear is responsive to sound frequencies up to a few thousand cycles per second but is not capable of responding to the higher frequencies encountered in radio. Arbitrarily a frequency of less than 10,000 cycles has been called an audible frequency—one which can be heard—and frequencies above 10,000 cycles, radio or inaudible frequencies—because they cannot be heard by the human ear.

The particular type of wave which propagates radio energy is an electro-magnetic wave. All of us have seen bits of iron and steel attracted by the little toy magnets made up in the form of horseshoes. This attraction of the magnet for the bits of iron and steel showed the existence of a magnetic

The high-frequency current is known as the carrier-wave and its function is to radiate into space in the form of electro-magnetic waves and by its variation in amplitude carry with it the variation in the tone at the transmitting station.

It is the frequency of the carrier-wave that determines the wave-length on which a radiophone station is transmitted. By experiment it has been found that electro-magnetic waves travel at the same velocity that light waves travel, that is, 186,000 miles per second. Wave-length is the distance between any two similar points on two successive waves; for example, the distance from crest to crest of any two successive waves in the same direction, measured in meters, a unit of length equal approximately to one and one-tenth yards. Converting 186,000 miles to meters, the equivalent is 300,000,000 meters. The length of an electro-magnetic wave is equal then to 300,000,000 divided by the frequency. Suppose a station was transmitting on a wavelength of 300 meters. The frequency of the carrier-wave would be approximately 835,000 cycles.

Just as a violinist tunes his instrument, that is, makes a certain string emit a note of higher or lower pitch, or, technically speaking, a sound wave of higher or lower frequency, by adjusting the tension on the string, so may the electrical constants of the antenna circuit of a radiophone transmitter be changed in order to have the station emit a carrier-wave of a different frequency.

If a tuning fork having a natural period corresponding to middle C be placed near a violinist who is playing, the fork will vibrate when the musician plays middle C, but all other times it will remain quiescent. This phenomenon of the tuning fork vibrating whenever the musician plays the corresponding note on the violin is known as mechanical resonance. If a radio receiver be adjusted so that electrically its natural period of vibration will be 835,000 cycles (300 meters wavelength) every time a station transmits on a wavelength of 300 meters, current will be set up in the receiver by field about the tips of the magnet and this same kind of a field propagates the electro-magnetic force, except that unlike the toy magnet, its power comes off in the form of wave motions. This electro-magnetic force propagates radio energy in all directions.

The medium that transmits the electro-magnetic waves is the same medium that transmits light—the ether. This medium is supposed to fill all space, even that occupied by fluids and solids. Little is known about its properties.

In radio it is more common to speak of wave length than frequency. The wave length of any wave motion is the distance between any two successive crests in the same direction. The wave length depends upon the frequency. If the frequency is high the wave length is short. On the other hand if the frequency is low the wave length is long. Numerically the wave length is equal to the distance traveled by the wave in one second divided by the frequency. Suppose, for example, that it were desired to know the wave length of an electro-magnetic wave having a frequency of 835,000 cycles. Electro-magnetic waves travel at the same speed as do light waves, that is, 186,000 miles per second. Dividing the 186,000 by 835,000 the wave length would be 223 miles or 396 yards. In radio work it is measured in meters. A meter is equal to approximately 1.1 yards. Converting 396 yards into meters the wave length would be 396 divided by 1.1 or 360 meters. This is the wave length on which KDKA operates. It also means that the electro-magnetic waves sent out from this station have a frequency of 835,000 cycles.

In a simple receiver the detector is the diaphragm. The function of this portion of the receiver is to utilize the small currents in the tuner that are set up by a transmitting station and make them audible through the medium of a telephone receiver. If the telephone receiver were connected directly to the tuner the high-frequency current would not operate the diaphragm of the receiver and even if the diaphragm were set in motion it would be too fast a motion to be picked up by the human ear.

In a simple receiver the detector usually consists of two pieces of mineral in contact or a piece of mineral in contact with a metallic spring. Either combination is known as a crystal detector.

A detector of this type is nothing more than a rectifier; that is, when an alternating current is applied at the terminals the current is allowed to flow only in one direction.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

In a radiophone transmitter there are two requirements that must be fulfilled. First, there must be a source of high-frequency current, say, between 15,000 and 1,500,000 cycles so connected to an antenna and ground system that energy in the form of electro-magnetic waves will be radiated. Second, there must be some method of controlling this high-frequency current or modulating it so that the variations in the amplitude of the high-frequency current will be directly proportional to the voice or music to be transmitted.

How One Editor Uses Radio.

The editor of a paper in an isolated town in the northwest is using the radio in a most ingenious and effective way. An amateur radio friend in a big city 50 miles away buys the latest editions of the city papers as soon as they are off the press, reads the best news into his transmitter, and a typist in the country office copies the news as it comes in over the office receiver. The editor, through this ingenious plan, is always "First with the Latest" in his home town.

WAR ROBS THREE OF MEMORY

Trio Among Most Unusual Cases on Record at Veteran's Bureau in Washington.

Three men who have lost themselves and whose memory does not extend back to the war where they received injury, are among the most unusual cases on record at the Veterans' Bureau in Washington, D. C., among the long list of war victims. The American Legion is endeavoring to assist the unfortunate ex-service men in finding their relatives.

Hayward Thompson—at least that is what he is now called—is one of the most peculiar cases. He has forgotten who he is. In his head is an ugly shrapnel wound. His memory goes back to January 22, 1922, when he arrived at a hotel in Denver, with a bill in his pocket from one of the most expensive hotels in Colorado Springs. His memory, he now believes, lapsed somewhere, either far back in France or on the trip between Colorado Springs and Denver. Thompson remembers having had $1,200 in his pocket and access to many thousands more.

In searching Washington records for some trace of the lost man, it was found that a certain Hayward Thompson enlisted in the Marine corps June 5, 1918, and was discharged January 6, 1919. He had a wife and three children at Flemington, Mo., and a mother, Mrs. Louise Thompson, at Chicago. The man with a shrapnel wound in his head and no memory of any relatives at all, telegraphed in great eagerness to Flemington, Mo., and to Chicago. He received no answer.

Not so long ago a clean-cut young man appeared at a Los Angeles hospital. He wore an American Legion button. When questioned as to who he was he stated he did not know. "I think I am thirty-two years old," he said. "I am five feet, nine inches and weigh 130 pounds. My eyes are gray and I have blond hair. I believe I was a soldier. If any one can tell me who I am, or anything about my past, please let me know." The Los Angeles post of the Legion is making every effort to help the man find himself.

A third "unidentified living" lives at 735 North Thirty-first street, Louisville. He is known as Leonard Wells, to the neighborhood. His memory is hazy. He believes that he enlisted in the old First Kentucky Infantry, and with the command was transferred to a replacement detachment and sent to France. His photograph was forwarded to his company commander, who recognized the face but did not recall a name. A machine gun bullet had pierced his abdomen and injured his spine. Another had injured the left shoulder cap. No compensation or insurance can be awarded to this man, the Veterans' Bureau regrets, until his identity can be established.

France, it is said, has six of these "unidentified" living ex-service men. Great Britain has a few. These lost souls who cannot find their memories, and who know they cannot, present a spectacle unique and pathetic. They are lost and know it.

ON "GREATEST HEROES" LIST

Sgt. Samuel Gluckman of the American "Devil Dogs," Rival for York-Woodfill Honors.

Another rival for the crown worn alternately by Sergeants York and Woodfill as the greatest hero of the World War has been uncovered by the United States veterans' bureau of Sergt. Samuel Gluckman, member of the American "Devil Dogs" during the war and decorated by both the American and allied governments.

Although born in Austria, Sergeant Gluckman enlisted with the marines at the outbreak of the war and although too modest to tell the story of his achievements while fighting against the Germans, the American Legion at Washington discovered that Gluckman fought in seven major engagements, Verdun, Bapaume Woods, Chateau Thierry, Marbach, St. Mihiel, Soissons and Mont Blanc.

On the morning of October 3, 1918, Sergeant Gluckman started out to get water for his comrades. He returned without the water but with 20 Germans and a painful wound. The "Devil Dog" sergeant captured a lone German and instead of bayoneting his captive forced him to lead him to the rest of the advance party. Coming onto the whole batch of 20, Sergeant Gluckman waved a hand grenade and ordered them all out of the shell hole they were occupying and into the arms of his American comrades. By executive appointment Gluckman is now employed at the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

LEGION MAN, AID TO CUPID

Henry Sullivan, Phoenix (Ariz.) Organization Enthusiast, as J. P. Ties Many Knots.

Having secured plenty of experience in braving the perils of the deep while a member of the navy during the war, Henry J. Sullivan of Phoenix, Ariz., is now helping to launch the several ships of matrimony that set sail from his home city. When the service men of Phoenix start their wedding barks they seek out Justice of the Peace Sullivan to unslip the rings of their single blessedness.

Mr. Sullivan is also the man who started the "Under one head, the American Legion" slogan which has been adopted by all the war organizations of his home county to advance the interests of the service men, carry on hospitalization work, eliminate drives and working generally for the benefit of the men who served their country.

As Mr. Sullivan himself expresses it: "All war organizations in the county have united under one head for the purpose of centralizing our work. We expect to lend our efforts largely to hospitalization work and in other ways serving the disabled service men by placing the responsibilities on the various departments of government where they belong rather than by advancing their rights in a slipshod fashion."

FORCE PERSHING TO SPEAK

Legionnaires of Bement, Illinois, Hold Up Old Commander's Car and Demand an Address.

General Pershing was captured while attempting to pass through friendly territory by a group of American Legion men at Bement, Ill. The old leader of the A. E. F. started through the town on an interurban trolley car, but Legionnaires, aided by a powerful ally in the person of the motorman, gathered in front of the trolley and demanded a speech.

The rear platform of the car was turned into a speaker's stage and "Black Jack" addressed the service men and their friends for ten minutes. The Legionnaires were marshaled together by Sidney Morgan, their post commander, who stood on the platform with his old general, and it was not until he had given the word that the former members of Pershing's command would give the trolley the right of way.

Adjusted Compensation Wins.

Adjusted compensation won a decided victory in the nation-wide referendum by the United States Chamber of Commerce—4,116 chambers voted favorably, 2,657 against the measure. The United States chamber has opposed the bill from the start. The commerce body in Toledo, O., protested the questionnaire which was sent out as being unfair in the way it presented the subject.

Carrying On With the American Legion

A community playground will be made by the Legion at Nashville, Tenn., the ex-soldiers bearing the expense of apparatus and upkeep.

In Korea, American ex-soldiers, most of them missionaries under the leadership of a Southern Presbyterian mission, have formed a post of the Legion.

During the war it cost Uncle Sam $300 to clothe each of his soldiers. The present doughboy is garbed in clothing costing but $180, the War department states.

The only woman field clerk in the army is Miss Jean Hodson of San Francisco, Cal., secretary to Major General Morton. She holds the rank of sergeant major.

The Legion in both North and South will henceforth observe the birthdays of Generals Lee and Grant, rival leaders of the Civil war. The birthday of General Grant was observed on April 27 this year and that of Lee will be observed January 18, 1923.

SEX OF EGGS AND CHICKENS

Department of Agriculture Says There is No Dependable Method to Determine Sex.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Raisers of poultry have long wished for a reliable means for determining the sex of chicks and of eggs to be used for hatching, but, in spite of the promise of various manufacturers of devices, the United States Department of Agriculture says there is no very dependable method for determining the sex of chicken that a certain egg will produce, and that it is extremely difficult to determine the sex of chicks of most breeds.

The department has made tests of a number of devices claimed by the makers to give good results in sorting out male, female and infertile eggs. In all cases they have been found to be useless for the purpose, as two persons could never get the same result with a lot of eggs, and hatching tests showed that one could do just as well by closing his eyes and picking out the eggs at random.

On account of the difference in the color of the down of the sexes it is often possible to select with considerable accuracy the hens and cockerels of the Barred Plymouth Rock as soon as they are hatched, but in the case of most other breeds and varieties this selection cannot be made with any certainty until some time later. Those who know the breed well are able to distinguish between the sexes of Leghorns when they are three to four weeks old. The sexes of the medium-weight breeds, with the exception given above, have the same appearance until the chicks are 10 or 12 weeks old. The surface sex differences in the Asiatic breeds are not as apparent up until the birds are three or four months old.

There may be differences that will make it possible to sort the sexes earlier, but so far poultrymen have found no reliable basis for selection.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF OATS

Used in Ration of Growing Chick It Does Much to Build Up Strong Frame and Muscle.

The importance of oats in the poultry ration cannot well be overlooked. It forms the backbone in many rations. It is chiefly important in the growing ration for young chicks, for it will grow frame and muscle more economically than any other grain. Steel-cut oats, rolled oats, or growing mash having ground oats or oatmeal as a base are exceptionally economical feeds for growing stock. Fed in connection with buttermilk, it makes the best growing ration known. Of course, a grain mixture should be fed for variety.

POULTRY NOTES

The busy hen is the one that lays the most eggs.

Chicks should not receive feed until they are 36 hours old.

The baby chick will not stand chilling. It must have access to heat whenever it desires.

Toe-mark the chicks as soon as they are hatched. This enables one to tell their ages later.

Disense control and sanitation are among the most important things in poultry management.

In cold weather ten to thirteen chicks are sufficient for one hen, while in warmer weather fifteen to twenty can be cared for successfully.

Nothing Else.

Charles (after the proposal)—Have you ever loved before?

Clarice—No, Charles. I have often admired men for their strength, courage, beauty, intelligence, or something like that, you know; but with you Charles, it's love; nothing else.

Considerate.

Papa—Why did you permit young Gaybird to kiss you in the parlor last night?

Daughter—Because I was afraid he'd catch cold in the hall.

HAD TO STAY IN BED FOR WEEKS

Omaha Citizen Says He Is Now Rid of Troubles That Had Kept Him Miserable for Years.

"I was almost out of commission when I began taking Tanlac, but it has made me feel like a new man in a short time," said W. S. Meadowlark, 7604 North Twenty-ninth St., Omaha, Neb.

"My liver and kidneys were out of order and I had terrible pains in my back and sides and was so bad off I often had to stay in bed for two weeks at a time.

"The results I got from Tanlac were a very glad surprise to me. It benefited me in every way and I believe the improvement I received will prove lasting and I feel stronger and better than in many a day."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

The Principal Inducement.

"What sends men into the far corners of the world?" asks one of the magazines. Our guess is that it is the hope of seeing their names in the newspaper headlines.

MADE WISE CHOICE OF WIFE

John Brown's Helpmate Apparently Ideal Woman for a Man of His Stern Disposition.

John Brown, whose body later on lay "smoldering in the grave," once described the lady who afterwards became his wife as a "remarkably plain but neat, industrious and economical girl." These latter virtues seem to have atoned for her want of physical charm, for he and Dianthe Lusk were married when she was nineteen and he was only twenty.

Dianthe was a strong-minded woman, but she made John an excellent wife, and their twelve years of married life—terminated by her early death—were most happy. He was a man of decided and violent disposition, and his wife is said to have possessed the faculty of getting him to do as she wished and causing him to believe that it was his idea all along.

She died in 1882, twelve years after their marriage and just after the birth of their seventh child.

Changing Figures.

"What is the population of Crimson Gglech at present?"

"No telling," replied Cactus Joe. "It was eighty-seven last night. But if Cactus Joe is as unforgiving toward Three-finger Sam as he was when the poker game broke up, I reckon maybe by this time it's only eighty-six."

One likes to be an optimist so far as believing that some day smoke will be abated.

Two Rich Printer's "BULLS"

Postmaster General Has Preserved Specimens of Work of the "Inspired Compositor."

Postmaster General Work has two choice specimens of typographical errors which he keeps on his desk handy to show to the discriminating. Like most everybody else in the world, Doctor Work appreciates that sort of thing.

Dianthe was a strong-minded woman, but she made John an excellent wife, and their twelve years of married life—terminated by her early death—were most happy. He was a man of decided and violent disposition, and his wife is said to have possessed the faculty of getting him to do as she wished and causing him to believe that it was his idea all along.

"Dr. Herbert Work, physician to the pope, was with the late pope in his last illness."

Evidently the inscriptions of the two photographs got mixed up, and nobody caught the error, on account of the title of doctor of both physicians.

The other sample was a picture of the postmaster general and an inscription which should have read: "Colorado Man Appointed Postmaster General."

But it got in like this: "Colored Man Appointed Postmaster General."

Every day is a new teacher and comes with fresh lessons for all who are willing to learn.

Stop worrying about the sorrows of yesterday and go after the joys of today.

Willie—I'll let you have half of it.

More Quality for Less Money

There never was a time when Goodyear Tires were so good as now.

They are bigger, heavier and stronger today than any earlier Goodyears ever were.

Yet Goodyear prices are lower now than ever.

Not even in those remembered days before the war did Goodyear Tires sell at such low prices as today.

Look at the figures listed below.

They represent an average decrease of more than 60% from Goodyear prices of 1910.

When you can get these better Goodyears at such prices, there is no question of the tire value at your command.

Your Goodyear Service Station Dealer will tell you that never in his experience as a tire dealer has he known the equal of this value. See him today.

Hail Destroys Millions of Dollars of Tobacco

The loss of tobacco by hail in this and other tobacco states within the last five years has run up into millions of dollars with only a small part covered by insurance. Yet, the amount of insurance received by growers who had the foresight thus to protect themselves against such loss, was enormous and should make every grower not only feel the necessity of insuring his tobacco crop against hail storms loss but to do that very thing and do it at once.

What Dr. Halley Says: Dr. Samuel H. Halley, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association, upon congratulating an insurance company on lowering its rates on tobacco hail insurance, said: "Within the period that I have had hail insurance I have had four severe losses. The money I received exceeded considerably what I paid in, to say nothing of my peace of mind that I was fully protected in case of a storm. I have always advocated carrying hail insurance on tobacco without which every grower takes a chance to lose all. With it he can, in safety, go into the business of producing a crop which requires, as does tobacco, so much labor, time and money. Now that the Burley Growers have gone into an organization to handle their business in a modern economic business-like way, I see no reason why all growers can not take out insurance on the reduced rates the companies are now quoting. Look up the insurance agent in your section now, and let him protect you against the loss of your tobacco. Policies effective July 10th, noon."

GO NO FARTHER

The Evidence is at Your Door
Marion proof is what you want and the statement of this highly respected resident will banish all doubt. Geo. A. Clark, E. Depot St., Marion, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills in my estimation are a mighty good kidney remedy. When I have had these attacks I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Hayes and Taylor's Drug Store. A few of Doan's has never failed to rid me of backache. I am glad to recommend them to anyone in need of a good kidney remedy."
